Sims witness sues Weber

Local woman calls book an invasion of her privacy

A witness in the Paula Sims murder case claims prosecutor Don Weber invaded her privacy when he co-authored a book about the case.

Stephanie Ann Werner-Cook of Granite City is seeking more than $15,000 in damages from Weber, the special prosecutor in the case, and Signet Books, publisher of "Precious Victims."

But Weber, who wrote the book with St. Louis Post-Dispatch reporter Charles Bosworth Jr., says Werner-Cook was "thrilled" to be included in the book.

Weber was a Madison County assistant state's attorney when he successfully prosecuted Sims for the first-degree murder of her 6-week-old daughter, Heather.

In the lawsuit, Werner-Cook says she is not a public figure and is entitled to her privacy.

She was Paula Sims' hospital roommate in 1989 when Sims gave birth to Heather at Alton Memorial Hospital.

Werner-Cook testified during Sims' trial in January 1990 that Sims described the disappearance of her first daughter, Loralei, in the same way she would describe Heather's disappearance to police six weeks later.

Loralei, 13 years old, disappeared from the Sims' home (See WITNESS, Page 2A)

Arrest may solve string of burglaries

A Madison man charged Thursday in connection with three Granite City burglaries may have actually committed four times that many, according to police.

Lee Kalyan Sr., 26, of the 800 block of Iowa Street, was charged with the burglary of a home in the 2200 block of Grand Avenue on Sunday, with the burglary of a home in the 2200 block of Washington Avenue on Tuesday and with the attempted burglary of a home in the 2200 block of Iowa Street, also on Tuesday.

Capt. Kip Pomeroy of the Granite City Police said Friday that Kalyan had admitted to police that he had burglarized at least nine homes in Granite City and a business and, at least, two homes in Madison.

"He was beating the (expletive) out of us on the south end of town," Pomeroy said.

Pomeroy said Kalyan's activities first came under watch by the department after a confidential source told police Kalyan had been committing "a lot" of burglaries.

"Then the Madison Police department came up with a video tape of a burglary at a tavern — it had been made by a hidden camera — and asked if we knew who the person on the tape was. It appeared to be the guy (Kalyan) we were watching."

On Tuesday, Pomeroy said, Kalyan hit two Granite City homes in a 30-minute period and, at one, was observed by a witness. Pomeroy said that after the witness picked Kalyan out of photo lineup, police arrested Kalyan in Madison.

"After he was arrested, he admitted to the other burglaries," Pomeroy said. "He said those were the ones he could remember for sure, but said he was unable to recall if there may have been more."

Explosion rocks area

No one was injured in an explosion that rocked the East Granite City and downtown Granite City areas early Thursday morning. According to Industrial Mill Service, 20th Street and Edwardsville Road, which contracts for slag from Granite City Steel, some water got into one of its cauldrons of hot slag, causing the explosion at approximately 6:30 a.m.

EMS reported no injuries or major damage as a result of the blast.

No fire was reported as a result of the blast, which took place in an isolated area.

Witnesses said there was a bright flash of light, followed by an explosion that rattled windows and shook walls more than a mile from EMS.

According to Granite City police, at least one resident reported a window had been broken.

Granite City is a good place to come from, says David C. Williams.

"It's a hard, tough place. Being hardened from living in a tough steel town serves a person well because when they go out into the world and find themselves roughed up a bit, they know it's not the end of the world."

"There are a lot of people who think that if you get punched in the nose you are going to die. Coming from Granite City, you know that, not only are you not going to die, it's not even serious."

Soon after President George Bush appointed Williams as inspector general of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in 1989, Williams' moral toughness was tested by his investigation of NRC's role in the Bush-supported reopening of Boston Edison's Pilgrim power plant in Plymouth, Mass.

The New Bedford (Mass.) Standard-Times described Williams' actions as "moral toughness." Williams' keelhauled the staff members for failing to question information spoon-fed them by Boston Edison. He made it clear that the NRC made decisions based on incomplete or inaccurate information about the preparedness of local towns and even about how many people lived near the plant.

Fog, sewer work combine to close down roadway

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

Dense fog early Friday morning added to the traffic woes on Pontoon Road, where installation of storm sewers cut across the busy two-lane highway near Breckenridge Lane in Pontoon Beach, bringing traffic to a halt.

The Long Lake Fire Department was notified Friday morning that Pontoon Road would be closed for 15-minute intervals during the day between Division Street on the west and Lake Drive on the east, Village Clerk Mary Warren said Friday.

There is a big hole in the middle of the road, apparently to install a culvert or crossover sewer line across the roadway, Warren said.

Village officials were not advised by the Illinois Department of Transportation that Pontoon Road would be closed Friday, but received the information from the fire department, she said.

Fire personnel relayed the information to the Pontoon Beach Police Department and two squad cars were dispatched for a period of time to the two ends of the affected section of road.

Fog restricted visibility, and use of emergency lights on the squad cars helped to alert motorists, a passerby said.

Sonnenschein still optimistic

The man who has led a four-year battle to develop a public aquarium, proposed for Pontoon Beach, said his dream may be about to come true.

Leonard Sonnenschein said he is so optimistic about financing for the proposed $1.25 million facility that he ignored a self-imposed Dec. 31 deadline for putting together a financing package.

"I am still here," he said after the beginning of the new year.

"There are indications that things will happen and we are working toward that end."

Sonnenschein said he has had discussions with officials of several area banks about selling $1 million in tax-exempt bonds.

He said that while there are no formal commitments, "we have a pathway toward those commitments. Based on the discussions we've had, I'm confident things will proceed in a timely fashion."

The Pontoon Beach Village Board last year authorized sale of industrial revenue bonds for the project. The Mid-America Aquacenter would be a 15,000-square-foot building, possibly on Pontoon Road near Illinois 111.

A private investor has promised to purchase $250,000 of the bonds, Sonnenschein said.

Several weeks ago, Sonnenschein said, he needed pledges to purchase the remaining $1 million in bonds by the end of 1991 to ensure the aquarium would be ready for the tourist season.

Sonnenschein said Thursday that he thinks the facility will be established soon.

An aquacenter would directly employ about 65 people and could spin off as many as 1,000 additional jobs for the area's economy, he said.

Sonnenschein began trying to interest area leaders in a $40 million aquarium in 1989 after he failed to interest St. Louis (See AQUACENTER, Page 2A)

NRC inspector credits Granite

By Mike Myers

Granite City is a good place to come from, says David C. Williams.

looking for a job in the near future. He wasn't. Williams, who has been a criminal investigator with various federal agencies for more than 15 years, said it was all in a day's work.

"A criminal investigator risks everything with each investigation. There is always a risk associated with discovery. Each investigation could be the one where you run out of luck, where the truth is not enough to protect you."

But, Williams said, the idea behind the Inspector General Act is to provide federal agencies with a "neutral, objective examiner of the final work" (See INSPECTOR, Page 2A)

$25,000 damage in fire at house

Damage estimated at $25,000 resulted from a house fire at 2390 Paul Drive, occurring at 2:15 a.m. Friday, Long Lake Fire Chief Mike Becker reported.

Betty Wicker, owner and occupant, escaped from the dwelling but two dogs died in the blaze, Becker said.

A third dog, a puppy, was rescued, one of the volunteer firefighters said.

The fire destroyed a bedroom on the northeast side of the single-story frame residence and spread to a hallway and attic.

There was heat and water damage in the remaining areas of the two-bedroom home.

The blaze apparently started in a bedroom where the owner was looking for her eyeglasses, using a Bic lighter. It caught the bedding on fire, Becker said.

Mrs. Wicker was not injured. She was alone in the house at the time of the fire. Two pumpers and a rescue truck responded to the alarm from the Long Lake Volunteer Fire Department. Dense fog covered the area at the time.

None of the firefighters was injured and the men and equipment were back in service at 4:45 a.m. Friday, the fire chief said.

Mitchell man hurt in industrial accident

A Mitchell man's life was on the line late Friday after an early morning industrial accident at Midwest Rubber's Saugeat plant.

Charles Michael Pritchett, 35, was listed in extremely critical condition Friday evening at St. Louis University Hospital officials.

Pritchett was transferred to St. Louis University when his injuries proved too extensive for St. Mary's Hospital in East St. Louis, officials said.

Midwest Rubber General Manager John Kerasauskas said Friday the company was not responding to media inquiries.

Rick Blevins, Saugeat Fire Department safety officer, told the Journal his department was roused by a 911 dispatch at 4:30 a.m. Friday.

According to Blevins, Saugeat firefighters arrived on the scene to find Pritchett trapped in heavy machinery.

products going out of the office."

Williams said he believes the IG program has held up well and that he has often been encouraged to undertake unpopular investigations.

"I think it's a tribute to the system that it is able to tolerate very bad news," Williams said.

"I believe the worst threat to our government is giving the benefit of the doubt or turning a blind eye to wrongdoers or wrongdoing."

Williams said that because the idea of government must be honest "is so strongly ingrained" in the American people, the American system of justice is the best in the world.

Williams said that because the American political system, allowing the truth to come out.

"There have been some exceptions, some re-writing of findings, but the system has held up pretty well," Williams said.

Oliver Stone's new movie, "JFK," presents the premise that the assassination of President John F. Kennedy was tied to a conspiracy involving government agencies and members of the military-industrial complex. The movie's director, Costner as a federal investigator fighting against a government cover-up.

Williams said he had not seen "JFK" and could not speculate on the merits of Stone's theories.

"But I think in recent years we have become much more adept at identifying and stopping these shadow groups" tied to the arms and military industries, he said.

Williams said Operation Ill Wind, the Wedtech scandal and the Iran-Contra scandal "prove that corruption could, and has, existed at high levels of government and industry."

But, Williams said, in the modern world it is almost impossible for two people to conspire without leaving a trail.

Technology is getting better, Williams said, and investigators are getting better using it.

Williams laughed at the memory of Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, faced with deleted files resurrected by computer specialists, bemoaning, "I thought when we hit the delete button it was gone forever."

"In this information age, there are not many houses of cards that can hold together very long," Williams said.

In the investigative field, Williams said, there is some truth to the Sherlock Holmes-Moriarty concept of the worthy opponent.

"There are different schools of thought. Some people despise the people they investigate," Williams said.

"But the investigators I most admire, that I think are most effective, are able to crawl inside the minds of the people they are investigating. They are able to identify the person's cleverness, the person's intelligence and develop some level of affection for the person."

"They almost become the person they are investigating. As that person, they are able to invent what must have happened and then can go out and find the facts to prove it."

Williams compared the process to working a puzzle: "You look at a hole in the puzzle and visualize the piece that goes there. Once you know what it is, it's easy to find."

As one of a handful of presidential-appointed inspector generals, Williams is at the pinnacle of the criminal investigation career field.

But, Williams said, criminal investigation was a "fall-back" career — "I wanted to be a teacher."

As a student at Granite City High School and later at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, Williams worked toward that goal. While at SIUE, Williams was drafted and served in Army Intelligence in Vietnam. After his discharge, Williams returned to SIUE and earned a bachelor's degree in education. From there, Williams went to the University of Illinois, where he earned two advanced degrees in education.

Unable to find a job teaching, however, Williams used his Army experience to get a job with the U.S. Secret Service. While there, he discovered he preferred the investigative half of his job better than the half spent protecting dignitaries.

When the U.S. Department of Labor formed an Office of Labor Racketeering to investigate ties between organized crime and organized labor, Williams jumped at the chance to move. He eventually headed the Office of Labor Racketeering, dealing with organized crime at its very highest levels.

From there, Williams went to the General Accounting Office, where he headed its Office of Special Investigations until appointed to his current position.

Williams said that his investigations include the Iran-Contra scandal, the failed nomination of former Sen. John Tower of Texas as secretary of Defense, the Marine security guards involved in espionage at the U.S. embassy in Moscow and the El Salvador death squads.

"I still think teaching is a great profession," Williams said, adding that he has done some teaching at colleges and the FBI academy.

But Williams said he loves investigations.

"Day to day, it's fascinating. Every day I'm learning new things and new skills."

"I can't imagine a profession that offers more chances to develop, individually, every day."

Battery, theft alleged

Police were called to the National Food Store, 3030 Madison Ave., where a fight was reportedly taking place between a security officer and an alleged shoplifter at 7:07 p.m. Dec. 27.

Patrolman Richard E. Miller went to the store's security office, where Rickie Eugene Teller, 38, of the 1800 block of Rhodes Street and Security Officer Michael Floore were struggling on the floor.

Teller allegedly struck Floore on the chest and arms with his fist.

Miller grabbed one of Teller's arms in an attempt to restrain him and Teller allegedly swung at Miller, hitting him in the chest with his fist as Teller tried to get up off the floor.

Miller reported hitting Teller with a flashlight on the arm and shoulder area and was assisted by another officer in handcuffing the suspect. At this point, two other officers also had responded to the scene.

Teller allegedly used loud and abusive language and made verbal threats before he was forcibly walked out of the store to a squad car.

Teller was alleged to have a 1.75-liter bottle of Jim Beam whiskey, valued at $14, in his possession at the store. He was charged with retail theft, resisting a peace officer and three counts of battery.

Three warrants served

Anthony Allen McCrea, 29, of the 2900 block of Kirkpatrick Homes was arrested at Illinois 162 and Maryville Road at 2:33 a.m. Dec. 26. He was served an Illinois State Police warrant alleging failure to appear on a charge of driving while his license was suspended, and two local warrants alleging failure to appear on a charge of not wearing a seat belt and another traffic violation.

Woman injured by man

An officer responding to an incident involving a man beating a woman at 22nd Street and Washington Avenue was told by Debra K. Nelson, 26, of the 2200 block of Orville Avenue that she had been struck by Grover H. Pace, 23, of Delmar Avenue.

She said he had become angry with her for talking with someone inside the Wayside Tavern. Upon leaving the tavern, he allegedly threw her to the ground three times. She reported experiencing pain in the right elbow and knee.

Pace was arrested and allegedly grabbed and held his hands to prevent handcuffs from being applied. He was charged with battery and resisting a peace officer.

State warrant served

An officer went to an address in the 900 block of 24th Street to remove a man not wanted there at 5:06 a.m. Dec. 28.

At the residence the officer found Billy S. Lay, 23, and arrested him on an Illinois State Police warrant alleging failure to appear on traffic charges.

Sonnenschein said he thinks the popularity of an aquarium would equal or surpass that of the new science center recently opened in St. Louis.

near Brighton in 1966. Her remains were found near the home several days later.

Werner-Cook testified that Sims told her she was taking out or burning trash when a masked gunman knocked her out and abducted Loralei.

Sims had told police who investigated Loralei's disappearance that a masked gunman invaded her home, forced her to lie on the floor and abducted the infant.

In Heather's case, Sims told police she was taking out the trash when she was confronted and knocked out by a masked gunman who abducted Heather from the family's home in Alton in 1969.

Heather's body was found several days later in a trash can near West Alton, Mo.

In Werner-Cook's lawsuit, she said she testified about "certain personal matters which, although part of the public transcript of the trial of Paula Sims, were not of such newsworthiness as to entitle defendant Weber or defendant Signet Books to utilize such statements or embellish same without her permission or knowledge."

Road

No traffic accidents were reported during the road closing period. The closing started about 7:30 a.m. and lasted until after 10 a.m., when one lane of traffic was being routed through the area at intervals.

Pontoon Beach Police Dispatcher Bobby Morgan said he first received word from Marvin Ribbing of the Long Lake Fire Department that the road was being closed.

"I called the funeral homes — Davis, Thomas, Irwin and Werner — and the bus people, the Granite City Police Department and some others, advising them to take an alternate route along Interstate 270 if they had to come out this way," Morgan said.

Installation of storm sewers along Pontoon Road's northern edge from the Alton and Southern Railroad tracks on the west side of the village to Lake Drive on the east is part of an extensive road-widening program.

Storm sewer work to this point had been limited to the right of way on the north side of the roadway and the installation of pipe is almost complete.

Work on the south side of the thoroughfare will now begin.

An IDOT supervisor at the scene Friday said work orders had been amended, switching the crossover point to the new location due to contaminated ground being found near the original area where the crossover project was planned.

Gasoline had leaked into the soil near the old Sunoco service station on the south side of the 3900 block of Pontoon Road, where the road initially was to be cut, she said.

The new crossover construction area lies east of Breckenridge Lane in the 4000 block of Pontoon Road.

The widening project will add a third traffic lane, for vehicles making turns.

Werner-Cook alleges that statements about her in the book have caused her "extreme embarrassment, fear and upset" and that she has been and will be "held up to public scrutiny and ridicule."

Her attorney, Thomas Hildebrand, said Werner-Cook objects to "the use of her name and the alleged facts and circumstances of her life without her permission." He declined to be more specific.

"She wants to get on with her life," Hildebrand said.

But Werner-Cook was excited about the book a few months ago, Weber said.

Weber said Werner-Cook called him in September or October to inquire if she was entitled to any reward for her role in the prosecution of Sims.

Weber said he told her there was no reward.

"She was very thrilled about the book," Weber said. "She said she felt like a celebrity. All her friends were asking her to autograph the book."

Weber said Werner-Cook also told him: "Everybody else is making money on this, and I want some, too."

He described Werner-Cook as very cooperative during the investigation and trial.

Reporter retires after 27 years with paper

Colleagues will miss Valerie

After more than 27 years of continuous service with the Granite City Press-Record Journal, Valerie Evenden is retiring from her full-time position of reporter.

Evenden announced her decision in October, but her retirement became official this weekend. She will be missed not only by her co-workers, but also the community which has depended on her almost as much as the editorial staff.

"I will always remember Valerie Evenden as the person who named the Venice-Lincoln Technical Center," said news editor Mike Myers.

According to Val, at the meeting where the center was formed the board voted to "see what Mrs. Evenden calls it in the paper and go by that," Myers said. Every time he writes the name of the Tech Center he said he wishes Valerie had given it a shorter name.

Copy editor Bill Winter said he was most impressed by Valerie's thoroughness in covering community events.

"She showed devotion to accuracy and fairness and to our approach of 'covering Dixie like the dew.' She helped immeasurably to keep the newspaper aware of events and responsive to them," Winter said.

Winter recalled Valerie's first stint in the news business for the Press-Record as one of 12 neighborhood correspondents.

"She clearly was the best social-news correspondent in our history," Winter said. "If there was a subject that needed detailed, caring coverage, she was the obvious choice to handle the task."

Former managing editor Dennis Grubaugh said he often turned to Valerie for guidance and sometimes a pick-me-up when he needed it.

"Every time one of my brainstorms turned into a drizzle, Val was right there to tell me she'd do whatever was necessary to make the next break the next morning," Grubaugh said.

Grubaugh, who now works for the Alton Telegraph, said he recognizes an emptiness that Press-Record Journal employees all will feel before too long.

"I miss her now, and soon, the rest of the news office is going to miss her, too," Grubaugh said.

to find they miss her, too," Grubaugh said. But it is not only the news room with fond memories of Valerie, her contributions and her personality.

"I have never heard her complain about her job," office manager Theima Patrick said. "If she ever had a bad attitude she left it at the back door."

Valerie will be missed for many things but the Press-Record Journal will continually be rewarded for her contributions. The foundation for excellence and benchmark for quality she has established will be lofty goals for future employees to try to live up to.

State has $1 billion payment backlog

When Gov. Jim Edgar pledged to put the state's fiscal house in order, he must have realized it would be a skyscraper of a job.

Edgar begins his second year in office this month, still wrestling with state government's deficit and deadbeat reputation. His first official act last January was to freeze spending on building projects and outside contracts.

A series of tough negotiations over spending cuts sent the Legislature's spring session into a record 19 days of overtime in July, but Edgar claimed a political victory and a "balanced budget."

By year's end, however, the governor was acknowledging a deficit of more than $500 million. He plans to turn his "State of the State" message to lawmakers Wednesday into an emergency call for at least $350 million in additional spending cuts.

Meanwhile, a backlog of unpaid bills continues to set records.

As of Dec. 27, the state comptroller's office was holding up $507 million in payments because it had only $10.5 million in the bank, spokesman Rick Davis said.

But the true backlog is about $1-billion, because the Department of Public Aid is keeping back about $470 million in bills for the Medicaid program, Davis said.

With delays of several months in paying bills, nursing homes and pharmacists have been among those forced to borrow money to meet operating expenses.

At least one Metro East nursing home closed, with the owners saying Medicaid payment delays were partly to blame.

The state's cash flow crunch has gone downstream, causing similar problems for school districts and governments.

State Controller Dawn Clark Nates and several Democratic lawmakers have called on Edgar to approve additional borrowing of up to $600 million.

They contend the state could borrow at interest rates of less than half of what it is forcing its suppliers to pay to stay in business.

Although the governor and legislative leaders have not agreed on cuts, they appear to agree there is no prospect in 1992 for any revenue boost through tax increases.

Student takes medical aid plan statewide

A local campaign to reinstate state-financed medical care for low-income people has grown into a statewide effort.

Lewis and Clark Community College student Scott Osburn is working with lobbyists to convince legislators to restore aid for the medically indigent (AMI), which was a target of cuts during the 1991 budget deliberation.

"Support for the medical coverage has to come from more than this area," Osburn said. He is enlisting people and organizations across the state.

"I have a friend who took some petitions to the Urbana-Champaign area," he said. "And I have a list of social service agencies across the state that I am going to send the petitions to."

AMI covered medical care for people whose income met the Medicaid standard but who were ineligible because they did not satisfy other requirements, such as a disability.

Osburn said he would like to have at least 22,500 signatures before he takes the petitions to the General Assembly.

Program cuts left 22,500 people without medical benefits. More than 500 former recipients live in Madison County.

The petition has 120 signatures now, though the drive hasn't yet begun in earnest.

Osburn, 30, began fighting the cuts in October after learning he was no longer covered.

AMI had covered the cost of Osburn's daily medication, doctor visits and special tests to treat epilepsy. Now the part-time student and part-time worker must pay his medication costs of $65 per month.

"I'm doing good just to pay for my medication," Osburn said. "I wonder how people like me are supposed to make it."

The AMI cut is just a small part of the national health care crisis, he said.

"People need to get started working on the problem. The lawmakers are not addressing

Osburn is looking to local organizations to help him with fund-raising efforts.

"It is going to cost quite a bit by the time you include the stamps, envelopes and gas money to go to Springfield," he said. All of Osburn's time and effort may never benefit him, he said.

By the time he takes the petitions to the Legislature, he will probably be working full time and no longer eligible for the benefits.

Durbin ready to announce

U.S. Rep. Dick Durbin, D-Springfield, will be announcing his candidacy for re-election in a series of press conferences across the new 20th Congressional District on Monday and Tuesday.

Before a federal redistricting plan was approved by a federal court panel in November, all of Madison County was in the old 21st District represented by Rep. Jerry Costello, D-Belleview.

The new map splits the county almost equally between the 20th and 21st districts, with Collinsville and Edwardsville now in Durbin's district.

Durbin, the only downstate congressman on the House Appropriations Committee, has focused on federal funding for Illinois highways, agricultural research at Illinois universities and economic development downstate.

Among the nine press conferences Durbin has scheduled are one at the Madison County Courthouse in Edwardsville and one at the Collinsville Senior Center, both on Monday.

Some may now claim income credit

Good news for lower-income workers: The government may owe you money.

Did you earn less than $21,250 in 1991, and have a child who lived with you for more than six months?

If so, you may be able to claim the Earned Income Credit (EIC).

The credit is subtracted from the tax you owe, so you end up paying less tax. Even if you don't owe any tax, you may get money back.

Married, single or widowed, you may be able to claim up to $2,020. Only people who file a "married filing separate" return cannot claim the credit.

In most cases, the child who makes you eligible to claim the Earned Income Credit doesn't have to be your dependent.

There are new rules affecting the credit for working families, the Internal Revenue Service says.

For 1991, the EIC consists of:

1. A basic credit. For one qualifying child, the credit may be worth up to $1,192 and for two or more, up to $1,235.

2. A health insurance credit — for up to $428 if you paid health insurance premiums that covered at least one qualifying child.

3. An extra credit for a child born in 1991 — that could be as much as $357.

To get the credit, you must file a tax return and fill out and attach Schedule EIC to your 1040 or 1040A tax return.

For more information about this credit, persons may call toll-free 1-800-825-1040.

New electronic filing to speed tax returns

Residents can join taxpayers statewide in a program to speed up their state income tax refunds through a new electronic filing system.

Taxpayers can file their 1991 Illinois tax forms under the Illinois Electronic Filing Program through a business accepted under the program. Illinois Revenue Director Douglas L. Whitley said.

"We are encouraging taxpayers who are expecting a refund to take advantage of electronic filing," Whitley said.

Eleven transmitters have committed to participate in the state, and H & R Block plans to begin phasing in their Illinois offices in January.

Last year, the department pushed a pilot program to test electronic filing. Officials have said the test was a success and will proceed on a larger scale this year.

Whitley said one of the biggest benefits of electronic filing is that it provides an instant computer check that reduces the error rate and the need to generate error notices.

The program also reduces processing time and cuts paperwork, he said.

"The most important benefit to taxpayers is a faster refund," Whitley said. "We expect electronic filing to accelerate the refund process by several weeks."

Not all forms can be transmitted, however. Only forms IL-1040, Schedule NR, W-2, W-2G or 1099-R can be used. Taxpayers using other forms cannot use electronic filing.

Whitley said he hopes that in three years or so 750,000, or 15 percent, of Illinois taxpayers who receive refunds will be using the electronic system.

Another electronic filing system pilot program is on tap this year to accept returns of taxpayers who have a balance due to the state, Whitley said.

200 lawsuits keep circuit clerks busy

Lawyers filed an avalanche of lawsuits in a last-minute rush to beat higher filing fees that went into effect Jan. 1.

Employees of the Madison County circuit clerk's offices were inundated with an estimated 200 civil lawsuits before the offices closed at noon Dec. 31.

Filings soared beginning two weeks earlier and accelerated Dec. 30, when 123 lawsuits were filed. Deputy clerks said 20 to 30 lawsuits are filed in a typical business day.

A new fee schedule effective with the new year boosted filing fees from $56 to $172 for civil lawsuits seeking damages of at least $15,000.

The charge to demand a jury went from $50 to $150. Other filing fees and court costs were also increased.

The new fee schedule, enacted by the Legislature and signed recently by Gov. Jim Edgar, affects Madison County and seven other counties.

Center providing 2nd chance

By Nicole Vaughn
Staff writer

Adults who wish they had a second chance at high school are getting just that at the Glen-Ed Pantry's Learning Center.

Since the center launched its General Educational Development program in November 1980, eight adults have graduated. Two more students have just taken the GED test.

"We want to create an atmosphere on their own turf at home that sets good examples for their children," said Nancy Grist, director of the program. "It's all about family learning."

The program has served students and their children, ranging in age from three months to 84 years. The classes currently meet three times a week in donated space at St. John's United Methodist Church, Edwardsville.

With two tutors from Lewis and Clark Community College — Pam Mills of Belleville and Debbie Schreiber of Edwardsville — and a handful of volunteers, the center also is offering assistance to three adults from a group home in Troy, a young man from Pontoon Beach, and prisoners in the Madison County Jail.

"It's really important for some of the prisoners because, if they get out and they don't have something to fall back on, they know they'll be right back in (jail)," Mills said.

Glen-Ed students come from all walks of life.

Grist recalled one student, a Collinsville woman, who braved last year's ice storms in house slippers to come to the classes via bus. Through the Glen-Ed pantry, the woman also received shoes.

"She wanted to be able to say to her kids, 'See what I did — now you do it, too,'" Grist said. "I promised when my kids were back in school all day that I'd go back to school," said Kay Johnston, 31, of Edwardsville. "It means more to me than anything right now."

Johnston dropped out in her senior year of high school because of problems with arthritis. She enrolled in the GED class at the end of September and will take the test in early 1992.

Johnston and her classmates have already met their Constitution test requirements — she scored five less points than perfect.

Johnston said she had a working knowledge of basic math but never understood algebra or geometry. Now she does, and she helps her seventh-grade son with his assignments.

"It's great because I tell my kids that everybody is going to school to 'get the smarts,'" Johnston said. "We're already smart but we want to be smarter."

"I want to get into college and make something of myself," said Lana Bengt, 22, of Glen Carbon. "I'm not depending on anyone anymore."

Bengt said high school lost its challenge for her "so I just stopped going." But now she realizes that she needs her education, especially trying to raise her almost 2-year-old son.

Bengt said she would like to get a job in data processing. She was trying to score a 300 on the test to qualify for a state scholarship. A 225 is passing.

Among the tutors is Bob Hansen, 40, of Holiday Shores. A self-employed trucker, Hansen earned his GED on Dec. 3. Hansen said he was "young and dumb" when he quit school in 1968.

"It was important to me mentally and spiritually," Hansen said of earning his GED. "Now I hope to do more here and help others out."

Age is not a barrier to learning. Two residents of the Anna Henry Nursing Home also attend the classes. Peggy Niederkorn, 74, said she only went to school through the ninth grade.

"I'll feel better about myself because it's something I want to accomplish," Niederkorn said of her GED.

For more information about the classes, call the Learning Center at 656-3288 on Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings or Nancy Grist at 656-9955.

THE VOICE BOX: Do you think across-the-board budget cuts are the answer to Illinois' budget woes?

By John Swistak Jr., T.L. Witt and Linda Schaeffer.

Jack Smith, Granite City
"I doubt it is going to take too much, but they are going to have to do something."

Melvin Moneymaker, Granite City
"I don't know if that would solve the problem in each instance or not. It depends on the circumstance."

Mike Gutherie, Collinsville
"I don't think it is as simple as that. I think they need to cut out a lot of the waste first. If you cut out the waste you won't have to cut out a lot of the programs."

Jim Chubb, State Park
"Oh, yes — any way to cut taxes. I think they can just cut everything. We have just way too much now."

Kerry Lavington, East St. Louis
"If they cut the budget they'll have to cut jobs, and people out of work is part of the problem now."

Sandy Koch, O'Fallon
"I guess they should cut a little bit of everything. I think that would help."

Sunken steamboat possible victim of 1856 ice gorge

An ice gorge that roared out of the Missouri River and backed up the Mississippi River during the winter of 1856 may have sunk a steamboat whose remnant was found recently at Alton.

William Carroll of St. Louis, a riverboat pilot for more than 40 years, said that when the ice gorge broke loose that February, it turned boats around on the Mississippi.

The phenomenon could be one of numerous possible explanations for the sinking of the side-wheeler riverboat that may have plied the Mississippi 140 years ago.

Carroll, 71, said he has researched old newspaper accounts of area river events dating to 1808.

Carroll, a vice president of Gateway River Cruise Lines, formerly Streckfus Steamers Inc., said an ice gorge forms when the river begins to freeze bank to bank and top to bottom. The gorge builds until warmer weather breaks it loose.

The ice gorge in 1856 was 20 miles long, he said.

"The river froze over at Christmas time," Carroll said. "It didn't loosen up until February."

One of the accounts I read told about a woodcutter who had a cabin at the mouth of the Missouri River. He was awakened about midnight. It had been raining pretty hard and the ground was shaking. He thought it was the New Madrid earthquake all over again.

"He looked out the window and saw the ice coming out with such force that, across the Mississippi, it was going over the bank."

"I don't know how many toward Alton. It's possible that a boat there was torn loose."

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers archaeologist Terry Norris said the 25-foot-long remnant of the boat found at Alton is the stern section of a side-wheeler steamboat that measured between 180 and 220 feet long.

He said it dates to between the middle and last quarter of the 19th century.

Norris said he didn't know why the boat sank, although he said the cause may be determined from archives.

The boat section was pulled in November from about 12 feet of sand near a new Clark Bridge pier being built 200 feet from the Missouri shore.

The waterlogged section was taken to Jefferson City, Mo., where it is undergoing "stabilization," a gradual drying out, Norris said.

Carroll said his ice gorge hypothesis was only a guess, but seemed to fit the circumstances.

"In that winter of 1856, the United States had unusually heavy snow and cold," he said. "Ice in St. Louis was reported three feet deep in the river. They tried to blow it up, but it didn't work, because it froze again."

He said 100 steamboats were tied up at the St. Louis landing that February and couldn't move because of the ice.

"Rivermen tried to cut a canal 10 feet wide off the stern of the boats to take the pressure off, but the intense cold just froze it up again."

'92's arrival triggers grab bag of revised statutes in Illinois

The following was written by Dennis McMurray of the Alton Telegraph's Springfield bureau.

State laws ushered in by the new year will make doing business tougher for phone solicitors and drug dealers but make life easier for women waiting for abortions, couples seeking to conceive children and for groundhogs.

A diverse grab bag of about 450 new laws that took effect Wednesday will further expand the state's already bulging statutes—books and, in some cases, affect residents' daily lives.

Two measures were inspired by public irritation. One bars companies from using automatic phone dialers to plug products between 9 p.m. and 9 a.m. and requires the devices to disconnect when the person being called hangs up.

The other requires operators of 800 numbers that charge at least $1 a minute to first give a description of the price and services and average time a call takes. Callers must then be allowed to hang up without being charged.

Another law could provide some relief for most of the population. Long lines at women's restrooms could be a thing of the past in sports stadiums and other new or remodeled major public facilities under the Equitable Restroom Act. It requires substantially more toilets in women's restrooms.

Several laws are aimed at drug dealers. One allows the attorney general's office to convene statewide grand juries with multicounty jurisdictions to investigate and prosecute drug trafficking.

Attorney General Roland Burris lobbied for the measure on the grounds that drug kingpins typically ply their trade across county boundaries.

Another law permits police to execute "no knock" search warrants at the homes of suspected drug dealers and other criminals if officers convince a judge it would be too dangerous to give a warning.

A law designed to keep guns from criminals or unstable people also took effect. Gun dealers must now call a special Illinois State Police number for a computerized check to see if a customer has a criminal background or a history of mental illness.

The cost of the system is being financed by a $2-per-call fee charged gun dealers.

Another new law will provide more money for domestic violence shelters such as Oasis Women's Center in Alton.

It allows judges to impose up to $100 in additional fines on people convicted of any of 40 crimes of domestic violence. The fees will be deposited in a special fund for distribution to shelters.

Two laws are intended to assist victims of sex crimes. One bars defense attorneys from suggesting that revealing clothing worn by a victim was evidence of "consent" to sexual assault. The other allows child victims of sexual assault or abuse to testify outside the courtroom through closed-circuit television.

Group health insurance policies covering 25 or more employees are now required to pay for infertility treatments if they already include pregnancy-related benefits.

Other new laws call for licensing of several more professions, including dietitians, marriage therapists, midwives and even manicurists.

Groundhogs should breathe a little easier when they come out to check on their shadows this year because a new law abolishes state bounties for the critters.

Cernyn Macon, going for a rebound at the Collinsville Tournament, will lead the Madison Trojans into Venice on Tuesday.

Varied holiday results for local hoops squads

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

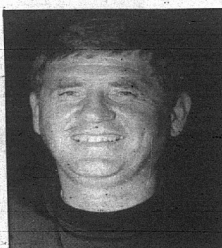

One set of tournaments is over and another is coming right up. But the big ones are still a long way off.

Area high school basketball teams are surveying the results of holiday tournament action. The Madison Trojans should feel good; the Granite City Warriors have lots of work to do; the Venice Red Devils are somewhere inbetween.

Fortunately, the regionals are still almost two months away, although each team will be playing in a mid-winter tournament in two weeks.

The Trojans took a 6-2 record to Benton on Saturday as they launched the 1992 portion of their schedule. They are coming off a fourth-place finish in the Collinsville/Schnucks Holiday Classic — the best they've ever done. Head coach Al Collins had a hard time getting his players to feel good about things on the final day of the tournament. But they had no reason to feel badly about losing to Quincy and Collinsville.

Madison was the smallest school in the tournament. They got a respectable fifth seed and exceeded that. When they traveled to Fletcher Gym on the morning of Dec. 28, they were no doubt thinking about winning it all, so losing twice had to be a letdown. But the Trojans lost to two of the better Class AA teams in the state. Quincy is a likely state finalist and the Kahoke are injured players back.

Bill Ohlendorf
... lots of work to do

"We didn't think we could do any worse than third," Collins said of the team's prospects after losing to Quincy in the semifinals. "But we just came out flat (against Collinsville)."

Skaters minus key players for tough stretch

By Dave Whaley
Staff writer

Santa left a couple more wins under the tree for Jake Hinterer during the holiday season. Unfortunately, he took several players with him for a couple of weeks.

The Warrior hockey team improved to 8-1-1 with a 9-1 win over McCluer North on Monday. Granite City needs all the wins it can get, because the next two weeks might be kind of tough. The Warriors play seven games in 12 days (that started Friday) against some good competition. For most of that time, they will be without perhaps their five top players.

Mike Jaros (21 points), Chad St. Peters (25 points), Derek Zirkelbach (20 points) and goaltender Brent Golden (1.91 goals against average) play for a AAA team which will be out of town the next two weekends. Defenseman Nathan Weaver (16 points) is with a Junior B team playing a tournament in Detroit. Kevin Sittion might also miss a game or two.

"It's a bad time for it to happen, but there's nothing we can do about it," said Hinterer, the Warrior coach. "Still, I think we're coming together a little more. The main thing we've worked on the last couple of weeks is getting some more production from our winners. We've got plenty of production from the centers and the defensemen." David Ezell responded with two goals and an assist Monday, as did St. Peters. Mark Nenniger had the first goal and added two assists. Chris Goclan also had a goal and two assists. Other goals came from Sittion, Rick Whyers and Weaver (on a penalty shot). Danny Thomas also had an assist.

Jim Monroe and Mike Hatfield split the goaltending duties as the Warriors outshot the Stars 64-11.

"I don't quite believe that," said Hinterer. "It might have been more like 43 shots. If it was 64, they must have given us a shot every time we wound up."

Granite City had beaten Hazelwood East 4-0 on Dec. 23 as Golden got his third shutout of the year. Zirkelbach, Jason Critter, Sittion and Weaver scored.

The Warriors played McCluer on Friday and Parkway North on Saturday before hosting Desmet this Monday at 4:45 p.m. at Wilson Park. They then play four games in five nights beginning Friday, although all of the players should be back for the Jan. 13 home game against CBC.

Basketball

We don't have very much depth, and that is always a big factor when you play two games in one day. I'm proud of how most of them played. We played with the big boys and didn't get embarrassed."

The Warriors, meanwhile, met coach Bill Ohlendorf's goal of playing four games in the tournament, but no one came away satisfied. They were seeded fourth and finished tenth.

Granite City (6-4) lost in overtime to a Springfield Southeast team which never should have won in the first round, then the Warriors were listless in a 67-48 loss to Edwardsville in the consolation final. They did beat Triad and Belleville East in the interim, but they had already beaten those teams once before.

Ohlendorf got two technicals in the Edwardsville loss. It was all part of a dreary mix.

"We played at the same level as the officiating we got," he said. "But I'm too old to let that affect me like I did."

Ohlendorf met for about 15 minutes with most of his key players after the Edwardsville game.

"We'll see the effects of that meeting later on," he said. "If we had won this game, we would have been close to where we want to be. But right now we're nowhere close. It's my job to get us close and I'm not doing it."

Ohlendorf expressed the most concern over Brian Smith, who's fighting a knee injury and inconsistent play. Jeff Smith, meanwhile, had a fine tournament and was named to the all-tournament squad along with Madison's Ron Williams and Ron Lott.

Granite City, which plays at Civic Memorial on Tuesday, just needs to turn its game up a notch or two to avoid being classed as underachievers.

The Red Devils (8-3) were seeded second at Columbia and got third for the fourth time in five years. They lost 72-54 to Freeburg in the semifinals before easing past Greenville 48-42. Though the record is good, the Devils still don't have the look of Venice teams of the recent past. That means in-your-face defense which ignites the transition game — followed by fast breaks and layups in bunches.

"We need one of the guards to step forward and be a leader, be a coach on the floor," said coach Clinton Harris. "It should be Johnathan (Love) or Marcus (Anderson), but even Cedric Wiley could do it."

Venice should have forward Ivan Johnson back in time for the Jan. 14 game at Gibault. Johnson is the team's leading returning scorer from a year ago, but he had to sit out the first semester due to grades.

Center Marcus Franklin has had to carry too much of the scoring and rebounding load so far. Several opposing coaches agree that Venice will be significantly tougher to deal with when Johnson returns.

"But he won't be handling the ball coming down the floor," said Harris. "We're still going to need one of the guards to be the leader."

Bruce Bradley's sudden change remains puzzling

Even in the radio business it's a little strange when a leading personality suddenly drops out of sight.

People get fired, of course, and disappear, and others leave to take other jobs. But when Bruce Bradley suddenly abandoned his job at KMOX-AM (1120) with only a note left behind, it certainly came as a shock to many observers.

According to reports from people associated with the station, Bradley's departure was his own idea. "He resigned for personal reasons, and didn't tell anyone he was leaving," said a station spokeswoman.

Bradley apparently simply left a letter of resignation for Robert Hyland, CBS vice president and general manager of the station.

About a month earlier, on Dec. 10, according to a source at KMOX, Bradley went to the station and was seen cleaning out his desk, leading to the belief that he was quitting.

"The next thing we knew he showed up at work (the following morning)," said news director John Angelides. It was "a nice relief," Judy Simms, director of advertising and promotion for the station, said of seeing Bradley on the job that next day.

A broadcast report on KTVI-TV (Channel 2) Dec. 30 by John Auble reportedly quoted Bradley as suggesting that he and his wife had been "beaten up by their friends and neighbors, apparently in the mental-emotional sense, Angelides said that sounded like what he called the "paranoia" some people in the broadcasting business develop. But he said Bradley had never said anything like that in his presence.

Bradley lived in Harvester in St. Charles County. He was most recently on the air weekdays afternoons as co-host with Anne Keefe on "At Your Service" from 2 to 4 p.m., and as a solo on "Total Information

Ian MacBryde

P.M. from 4 to 6 p.m.

As a personality on a talk station, he frequently offered opinions on all sorts of subjects as they came up in conversation both with Keefe and with listeners. Occasionally irreverent, frequently funny, he no doubt drew a lot of verbal fire in social situations.

Most on-air people would probably tell you that isn't always easy to deal with. CBS made bad move on Buck. From this perspective at best, it's not hard to figure out why the folks at CBS Sports are losing so much money broadcasting baseball. They make some really dumb decisions.

Not only did they pay a billion-dollars for so for the privilege of televising baseball—a figure reportedly much higher than bids from competing networks—they then proceeded to give the game less exposure during mid-summer than it got in previous years.

Then, they failed to pick up the opinion for the services of Jack Buck, who could lay claim to being the world's greatest living baseball talker. Of course, we're privileged here in St. Louis. We get to hear Buck on radio as a part of our regular diet.

He presents the game for what it is—a few moments of drama strung together with a whole lot of opportunities to talk to your buddy, tell stories, and relax in the summer heat. That's what Buck does so well. He understands the game even if his bosses at CBS don't.

Ian MacBryde is an independent video producer and former television executive.

Camping info on Carlyle

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Carlyle Lake has announced the following information for people, groups or organizations who would like to reserve a picnic shelter or the McNair or Lotus Group Camping Areas during the 1992 recreation season.

Group camping reservations will be available from May 1 through Sept. 13, 1992. Picnic shelter reservations will be available May 1 through Sept. 30, except those shelters at McNair, which will be available May 1 through Sept. 13.

Due to the high demand and the limited number of sites and dates available, requests for reservations will be taken by mail for five weeks, from Jan. 2 through Feb. 7.

All requests must be received no later than 4 p.m. on Feb. 7. The selection will be done in a random drawing on Feb. 10 and those selected will be notified by telephone or mail within 10 days from the date of the drawing.

Any remaining open dates will be made available on Feb. 24 on a first-come, first-served basis by phone or in person Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m.

Telephone reservations must be made at least 14 days in advance. Walk-in reservations must be made at least seven days in advance.

Reservations and fees will be processed Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. only.

Park rangers are asking people to use alternative dates and to select areas that are not used as much as some of the more popular recreation areas in order to increase your chances.

Due to the high visitation over the holiday weekends, group camping reservations will not be accepted for those times.
